

TERMINATING PROBATION – ADULT

- AUTHORITY: Sections 1203.2, 1203.3 California Penal Code
- RESCINDS: Procedure Manual Item 2-3-023, dated 01/06/21 (Recertified)
- FORMS: Adult Risk/Needs Reassessment (ICMS)
Adult Modification Petition Worksheet (F057-2078A)
- PURPOSE: To provide uniform guidelines for terminating Adult Probation cases.

I. GENERAL INFORMATION

- A. Probation grants vary in length because of statutory guidelines and Court discretion.
1. The Court specifies the duration of probation at the time of sentencing.
 2. It usually lasts one, two, or three years (one year is most common for misdemeanor offenses, while two years is most common for felony offenses).
 3. Expiration of probation takes place automatically at the end of the specified time unless changed by a Court's order revoking, terminating or extending probation.
- B. The Court may modify, revoke and terminate probation if the Court has reason to believe the individual on supervision has violated any conditions of probation or has committed other offenses, regardless of whether the individual on supervision has been prosecuted for such offenses:
1. Upon its own motion
 2. Upon petition of the:
 - a. Individual on supervision
 - b. Probation Officer
 - c. District Attorney (DA)
- C. The Court may, at any time during the term of probation when the ends of justice would be served, and when the good conduct and reform of the person on probation warrants it, terminate probation.
1. The DA must be given a two-day written notice and an opportunity to be heard on the matter.

2. Modification of sentence under these circumstances can include reducing a felony to a misdemeanor per 17b PC at the Court's discretion.
- D. The Probation Department does not ordinarily recommend early termination of probation due to good adjustment. It is the position of the Probation Department that individuals on supervision should serve their full term of probation as ordered by the Court. However, modification of probation to Relief of Supervision or Conditional Sentence is possible. Refer to Procedure Manual Item 2-3-004 for modifying conditions of probation. If the individual on supervision is granted Relief of Supervision or Conditional Sentence, all terms and conditions of probation remain in full force and effect until expiration of probation. The only change is that the Probation Department no longer provides supervision.
